Scope and Audience

This policy applies to Public Records of the University.

This policy does not apply to records which do not relate to the conduct or administration of the University's business. Some files and correspondence of faculty and staff of the University do not pertain to their work at the University and are not, by law, regarded as Public Records.

Accordingly, such records are not required to be managed according to this policy; however, faculty and staff are encouraged to offer non-public records to University Archives so that materials having historical or research value may be permanently preserved in the University Archives.

Any questions about whether a record is a Public Record or a non-public record should be directed to the Office of the General Counsel.
